2019 KA POUHANA (MENTOR) AWARD

The College of Tropical Agriculture and Human Resources recognizes that student learning is not confined to the classroom. Co-curricular activities associated with CTAHR student organizations are an important educational component in the college's instructional program. Student organizations assist graduate and undergraduate students to develop leadership, project management, and human relationship skills that are crucial to their future success. Co-curricular activities enrich student life at the University of Hawai'i by providing opportunities for interaction between faculty and students. Faculty members play an influential role in the education of CTAHR students through co-curricular activities.

CTAHR is now seeking nominations of a CTAHR faculty member for the Ka Pouhana (Mentor) Award, which recognizes outstanding support of student learning and development through co-curricular activities. The awardee will receive a certificate and $1,500 which can be used at his or her discretion for instruction-related activities. The 2018 Ka Pouhana Award recipient was Dr. Jenee Odani, Associate Specialist in the Department of Human Nutrition, Food & Animal Sciences.

Who May Nominate

Self-nominations and nominations by faculty, students, and others will be accepted.

Criteria for Selection

1. CTAHR faculty member or lecturer.
